The most Italian of cities

Conjure up any image of Italy, and you can find it in Naples, arguably the most Italian of cities. Pizza, sunshine, scooters, football and some of the world's greatest art, all in the shadow of Vesuvius, mainland Europe's only active volcano. Settled by the Greeks around 470 BC, the city has had an often troubled past, and the present is not without its troubles either – however the infamous rubbish problems have been resolved, crime figures are down, and tourism is on the up.

Cuisine: Italian

Credit cards: DC, MC, V

Price range: Main courses € 7-€12

Opening Hours: Lunch served noon-4pm
Mon-Sat, dinner served 7-10.30pm Wed-Sat

Home cooking in the heart of the Old Town

Initially (and still) an enoteca, selling wine by the litre, Campagnola's back room has been transformed into a homely seating area with wooden tables and chairs. Choose from the menu on the blackboard and housewife Teresa Castelluccio prepares it in the small kitchen – the insalata mista is a must, heaped with all types of vegetables in season. Willem Dafoe and Johnny Shand-Kidd have been spotted eating here, so you're in good company.

Buongustaio

Cuisine: Italian

Credit cards: Not Accepted

Price range: Main courses € 6-€10

Opening Hours: Lunch served noon-3pm daily,
dinner served 7.30-11pm Mon-Sat

For lovers of good food

Buongustaio means someone with good taste, and the cooking here lives up to expectations. A simple tiled seating area caters for the buongustai – there is no menu, just the irreverent Salvatore listing the day's specialities. Don Gaetano prepares your typical pasta e patate or fagioli con cozze (beans with mussels) and the atmosphere is jovial. With tables side by side, don't be surprised if your neighbour strikes up a conversation with you.

Cuisine: Italian

Credit cards: Not Accepted

Price range: Main courses € 6-€12

Opening Hours: Lunch served noon-3.30pm daily, dinner served 7.30-11pm Tue-Sat

Great fish in homely surroundings

Da Nunzia is just off Piazza Dante, with just a few tables (and a large television) occupying the entrance area, next to the kitchen where Nando and Gaetano Scognamiglio prepare sumptuous dishes – the antipasto is a meal in itself, with grilled vegetables and tasters of both the meat and fish dishes. The downstairs area takes the overflow, but locals try to sit upstairs for the atmosphere.

Forchetta D'Oro

Via Scura 52 80134

E-Mail: forchetta.vm@libero.it

Phone: 39 081 5526111

Cuisine: Italian

Credit cards: Not Accepted

Price range: Main courses € 4-€8

Opening Hours: Meals served 11am-10pm Mon-Sat

A quick taste of Naples

Forchetta D'Oro is not so much a restaurant as a tavola calda in the busy Montesanto area, so choose your already freshly prepared food at the counter, pay at the till, and join the diners on high stools at the bar. Enzo Manzo will patiently describe the fare (prepared by his father Aldo) and, if you wish, direct you to the more traditional tiny, rather shabby, upstairs seating area.

The next best thing to a yacht

Castel dell'Ovo shares the Borgo Marinaro with several restaurants, each offering sumptuous fish dishes. La Scialuppa, run by the Starita family, has been here since 1860. Mediterranean dishes are expertly prepared by Antonio Conte, while owner Salvatore Starita makes pastiera, babà and caprese, all cakes typical of Naples. Sports events are shown on the big screen inside, while outside seating is on a platform over the yacht-filled port of Santa Lucia, with a delightful view of Mount Vesuvius.

Da Tonino

Via San Teresa a Chiaia 47 80121

Phone: 081 421533
 Cuisine: Italian
 Price range: Main courses € 4-€8

Opening Hours: Lunch served noon-3pm daily,
 dinner served 7.30-11pm Fri-Sat

Not for shy, retiring types

Tonino Camfora's great-grandfather opened this place in 1880 – the penniless Enrico Caruso was an early regular. Nowadays Tonino extends a warm welcome to every diner, and fusses around in the narrow space between the tables filling the two rooms. Rightly popular, don't count on having a table to yourself, but remember many lasting friendships have been formed here. The menu is handwritten daily and the dishes prepared by Tonino's wife Nina in the kitchen are delicious.

Long-established Neapolitan favourite

Umberto Di Porzio opened this place in 1916, and his grandchildren Massimo, Lorella and Roberta are now at the helm. Chef Gennaro Pace is in charge of the kitchen, and a wood-fired oven produces aromatic pizzas. Part of the Slow Food movement, this is the only restaurant in Naples with a gluten-free menu. Umberto's cellar has almost 200 different wines, and the warm decor is enhanced by revolving art exhibitions of local artists' work.

Phone: 081 5567070

Cuisine: Italian

Price range: Main courses € 5-€8

Opening Hours: Meals served noon-3pm,
7.30-11pm Mon-Sat

Homely surroundings and home cooking

Opened by Donna Teresa in 1913, her eponymous osteria is now run by her grandchildren. The green checked tablecloths and home cooking evoke the atmosphere of times long gone, providing a welcome respite from the shopping mayhem and traffic of Vomero. Owner Luigi's wife Anna Di Marino presides in the kitchen, while their daughter Teresa serves the table, just like her grandmother almost a century ago.

A piece of Vomero pizza history

The plain surroundings may put you off, but Neapolitans swear by the pizza at Acunzo. In the business since 1964, owner Michele Sorice and his wife Caterina Acunzo know their strengths, with a rather limited menu. Patrizio Acunzo prepares delicious aromatic pizza margherita, the four-flavour pizza Acunzo, and a few specialities like calzone stuffed with beans. Get here early, as it is likely to be crowded with the Vomero set.

Fine dining in luxurious style

Dress up for the occasion – this is fine Italian dining as it should be. The Pompeian-red marble floors and walls line the 50-seater interior, but the large terrace is the place to dine on a warm summer evening. Overlooking the Borgo Marinaro with its tiny port and Castel dell'Ovo, Capri stands proud on the horizon. Head chef Armando Castellano prepares local Neapolitan specialties such as homemade pasta with zucchini and Provolone del Monaco cheese. Bliss.

Pizza fit for a president

Ernesto Cacialli, a pizza maker since he was seven years old, had the honour of preparing a pizza margherita for Bill Clinton when he visited the city for a G7 summit in 1994. The oven takes up most of the shop front, and the downstairs air-conditioned seating area is adorned with photos and awards from Ernesto's illustrious career. Il Pizzaiolo del Presidente is close to the Duomo and is one of the most popular in the city, so be prepared to wait to be seated.

The day's catch for fish lovers

A tiny family-run shack-like structure near the port's Calata di Massa, Il Piccolo Ristoro is the best place for fish. Salvatore, helped by his mother Carmela, prepares fish dishes that don't come any fresher than this, while his wife Carla and sons Ernesto and Giovanni look after the diners in the tiny indoor dining room and larger canopy-covered outside area. Prices have risen recently, reflecting its popularity, but it's still one of the best deals in Naples.

Contemporary Japanese cuisine

Although Kukai is one of Naples' leading Japanese restaurants, it is also one of the most Neapolitan, given its location. In the heart of the Quartieri Spagnoli, it was opened in 2003 by siblings Massimiliano and Monica Neri on their return from Tokyo's Waseda University. Akiko and Satoshi prepare delicious sushi dishes behind a glass counter at the back of the recently renovated minimalist dining area. The downstairs seating area also has a tatami room for the real Oriental experience. With good food at good prices, booking is advised.

Lunch in the back streets of Naples

A favourite of the University's Faculty of Medicine students and professors (the department is just around the corner), Cantina La Sapienza is buried in the back streets of Naples. A basement ('cantina') a few steps below street level, it is usually only open for lunch, Gaetano Formato welcomes you with a smile as he seats you at one of the tiny tables. The rather limited menu features pasta e ceci (chick peas) and caponata, a salad served on a bread base, all prepared by Silvano Alfano in the tiny kitchen.

Keeping it in the family

With a total of 21 pizza makers, the Sorbillo family's products are a favourite of locals and visitors alike. Three pizzerias with the same name sit side by side, although this is the original (and, as the sign claims, the best), with Gino Sorbillo working behind an arch at the back of the main room. Crowds throng the entrance as they wait for their turn, many of them choosing the Sofia Loren, created for the actress and delivered to her hotel room on a 2008 visit to Naples.

Wasting time in the best possible way

A great name for a bar, Perditempo ('wasting time') was an instant hit when it opened in early 2008. By day a book and record shop (check out the vinyl downstairs), by night it's a gathering place for the alternative set, who spill out onto one of the Centro Storico's narrow streets. The decor is akin to someone's living room, with shelves stacked with books, a bar in one corner and a console playing suave sounds in another. There's free wi-fi for those with laptops to waste time online.

Much more than a cybercafé

The name is a long way from saying it all – sure, you can surf the net at the Internet Bar, but most clients never even go inside, preferring the outside seating area in Piazza Bellini. The last in the square's line of bars, it is host to occasional live music soirées and has a big-screen TV for sporting events. If you're feeling peckish, ask the friendly staff for a sandwich menu – the crostone with salsiccia and friarielli is a favourite.

Reggae nights

Reggae is big in Naples, and when the original Kinky Bar closed its doors for the last time in 2007, this club rose from its Rastafarian ashes. The entrance is at street level, just opposite the Modernissimo cinema, with a flight of steps leading down to the chill-out area with its Jamaican-style scents. The main room has the bar and large dance floor, where international and local DJs, as well as live acts, provide the soundtrack.

An arty night out

With the aim of promoting art and culture in Naples, events ranging from theatre to music and cinema are held here. Slightly removed from the centre, it's worth searching it out for the setting alone – housed in a one-time woollen mill, the entrance is through a gate and across a courtyard. Isolated from the chaos of the city, the area hosts year-round indoor and outdoor events by local and international artists.

Extreme art softened by great views

Naples' newest museum hosts a permanent Hermann Nitsch exhibition, a rather disturbing collection of this Austrian artist/actionist's photographs, films and installations. If his works depicting controlled violence and organic mutilation are not your scene, there is also a well stocked library for research students, with a section devoted to contemporary music. The building is real gem, a restructured one-time electricity power station, with its white 19th century façade. The view of the city is stunning too – take the lift to the roof for the best effect.

A museum of contemporary art

The Museo d'Arte Contemporanea Donna Regina (MADRE) is housed in a reclaimed, and beautifully renovated, public administration building in a lacklustre area of the city. Spread over four floors and the adjacent gothic church (worth the admission price alone), permanent exhibits include works by Francesco Clemente (a two-storey homage to Naples), Joseph Kosuth, Anish Kapoor, Damien Hirst and Jeff Koons. Recent visiting shows included works by Jannis Kounellis and Brian Eno.

Underground art

The Times named Metronapoli the world's most beautiful metro system, thanks to the decision to house works by leading contemporary artists in the newer stations. Often created around the station's architecture, the six Linea 1 stations from Dante to Vanvitelli feature specially created works by Joseph Kosuth, Jannis Kounellis and Sol Lewitt, as well as Mario Merz's final work before his death. Step outside the Salvator Rosa stop to admire the entrances, where mosaics adorn two striking steel-and-glass spires, echoing those in the Centro Storico's main squares.

Arts and archives in upmarket surroundings

The Palazzo delle Arti Napoli has no permanent collection, but defines itself as a 'centre for arts and documentation'. Housed in the beautiful 17th-century Palazzo Rocella in the city's most upmarket area, it has 60,000 sq ft of exhibition space. The small ground-floor auditorium hosts art and literature discussions, performances and film screenings, while the fourth floor has an extensive archive of contemporary art in Naples. Recent exhibitors were film director Peter Greenaway and musician Lou Reed, the latter showing photographs of his native New York.

Living history and tradition

Naples' leading café is an attraction in itself. The outside seating looks onto Piazza del Plebescito, the Royal Palace and the San Carlo opera house, while the Liberty-style interior, with its mirrored walls and gilded ceilings, is where left-wing intellectuals (including Oscar Wilde and Guy de Maupassant) used to gather. These liaisons were curtailed in the 1930s when the government closed some of the meeting rooms, but, perhaps not ironically, the Italian president chose to spend his first euro here.

Naples' Life Aquatic

One of Europe's oldest aquariums, it was established in 1872 by the German scientist Anton Dohrn. Sea water was then, as now, pumped from the bay to the large tanks filling the single ground floor room – these same tanks now display over 200 species of the Bay of Naples' marine life. A delightful stop within the grounds of the Villa Comunale, the Stazione Zoologica (its official name) is also a leading public research institution in the fields of marine biology and ecology.

This unassuming church, once a charitable institution, now houses an art gallery displaying paintings by the great masters. The most notable is Caravaggio's 'Seven Acts of Mercy', hanging above the chapel's high altar, commissioned for the then-new church. Painted in 1607 and depicting the traditional seven acts of Christian charity, critics have described it as 'the most important religious painting of the 17th century.'

A quiet haven in the midst of the mayhem

Those interested in Angevin Gothic will want to see the stark Santa Chiara church, with its impressive bell tower, or perhaps the religious museum, but the highlight is the spectacular majolica cloister. An oasis of peace, perfect peace, fading 14th-century frescoes adorn the surrounding walls, but take second place to the garden. Citrus trees and hanging vines are complemented by benches and octagonal columns covered in hand-painted tiles from the 18th century.

Old, older and oldest

Under the church of the same name, the San Lorenzo archaeological site is a fascinating look at Naples through the ages. In the heart of the city, you leave the 21st century at street level, descending to a Roman street, then down one more level to a market from the Greek Neapolis of over 2,000 years ago. A miniature model shows how little the city's layout has changed over the millennia.

San Gregorio Armeno

Via San Gregorio Armeno 80135

Christmas all year round

The 'Christmas street', this narrow street in the heart of the Centro Storico displays the famous presepi, the intricate Neapolitan nativity scenes, and their necessary accessories. The picturesque campanile of the convent of San Gregorio Armeno towers overhead, and in December shoppers throng the streets (it can take ten minutes to walk 100 feet). Clay models of politicians, actors and football figures share space with the cherubs and shepherds – new arrivals this year included Napoli's star player Lavezzi and, unsurprisingly, Barack Obama.

Pignasecca

Via Pignasecca 80134

Hustle and bustle

A transport hub, with the Montesanto metro, local train and funicular line meeting here, as well as a hospital, Pignasecca is Naples' busiest market area and a real Neapolitan experience. Fresh fish, tripe sellers, fruit stalls, clothing and shoes all vie for your attention, while the shops offer an array of homeware, CDs and nightwear. Pizzerias, tavole calde, trattorias and bars hide behind the stalls and in the back streets.

This tiny place is packed with the Centro Storico's cognoscenti. The bar runs the length of Superfly, with the opposite wall hosting regularly changing exhibitions by local photographers and artists.

Grab a place on one of the high stools by the bar and let Gianni pour your drink while a DJ spins cool lounge and jazz sounds. When things get too crammed, move outside, where punters take over the narrow lane.
